Foreword

Catherine Holden Chair

It has been another successful year for Craft Scotland, developing our support for makers and the wider craft sector. We were delighted this year to add to our annual programme a new presence at London Craft Week and the international art fair Collect. An impressive spectrum of work was showcased to visitors, collectors, curators and gallerists, conveying the quality and range of our sector. My thanks to the Board and team who spent considerable time developing our strategic plan for 2018-2021 and our successful application to Creative Scotland to retain Regularly Funded Organisation status. We welcomed four new Board members in 2017 – Dr Elizabeth Goring, Sandra Gunn, Kirsty Sumerling and Pete Thomas – and created a new equalities plan as part of our ambitious strategic programme. We thank Creative Scotland for their vital support, alongside a growing number of invaluable funders and partners.

Fiona Logue Director

We take great pride in the wonderful talents of our makers working in Scotland. Their creativity and beautiful works are celebrated both nationally and internationally, contributing greatly to our country's reputation as a world class source for quality and craftsmanship. Craft Scotland's aim is to support our makers, promote their work and engage new audiences. This year our review has grown, reflecting our enhanced programme of activities. We were delighted to return to Collect with great success, to develop our outreach programme working with new partners and to deliver our stunning new website. Our plans for next year are no less ambitious with the development of a new continuous professional development programme. We look forward to doing our part to build a strong infrastructure and economy for craft.

In The Caledonian Club, furniture maker Angus Ross and designer/maker Jennifer Gray shared the techniques behind their innovative practices to a captivated audience. Craft Scotland and The Caledonian Club hosted a reception and dinner with the makers for their art group, members and guests. This was followed by a public event where visitors to London Craft Week could meet the makers and discuss their work.

Craft Scotland Summer Show

White Stuff, Edinburgh

4 – 27 August 2017

Makers: 33

Audience: 5300+

Sales: £29,000+

With increased sales and footfall, partially due to increased marketing, the fifth year of the Summer Show was the best yet. During the Edinburgh Festival Fringe, 33 emerging and established makers showcased affordable work to local and international visitors. For 2017, the show was repositioned as a design-led concept showroom with commissioned campaign imagery and popular maker-led workshops. Post-show, 66% of participants reported connections with press, private commissions, collectors or galleries. We hosted a local coffee bar by Williams & Johnson Coffee Co. and held events with local creative networks. The show received an extensive amount of press coverage (including The Times, Scotland on Sunday and 5-stars in Broadway Baby) and we invested in a media-partnership with The List.

Craft contributes to our quality of life¹. Through our year-round Outreach programme, we aim to increase and diversify the audience for craft. The programme started as Meet Your Maker and has evolved thanks to positive feedback and support from participants, makers and partners.

For 2017/18, we selected partners for a long-term series of meaningful participatory workshops. Aligned more strategically with our equalities, diversity and inclusion plan we now directly target two audiences; young and older people. Partner highlights included:

Historic Environment Scotland delivered a creative programme for young people, to inspire the next generation of makers, through exploring their heritage. Over three months, three makers worked with Denny High School (Falkirk), St Modan's High School (Stirling), Forth Valley College and Artlink Central. Part of the Year of Young People 2018, there was a showcase and public workshops at Stirling Castle and The Engine Shed.

The National Museum of Scotland hosted eight maker-led workshops in early 2018. Participants explored the Museum's collections and created works in response. These workshops were specifically designed for those living with dementia, their family, partners and carers. Participant benefits included reducing social isolation and allowing them to express themselves creatively.

Building digital audiences

We support makers and promote wider craft sector initiatives to a diverse audience through our online activities. Our website provides a year-round valuable resource to makers, curators and those interested in contemporary craft.

In September 2017, we launched the new Craft Scotland website with part-funding from Scottish Enterprise. Together with agency Everyone, we have created a visual digital platform to showcase craft from Scotland.

Maker Community

The Maker Community saves makers' time by housing the information they may need to grow their craft business in one place. The Opportunities, Organisations to Know and Resources sections list craft shows, funders, training and up-to-date craft research. Content is submitted for free by makers/organisations and frequently uploaded by the team. A selection of opportunities is available in a tailored monthly newsletter for makers.

Craft Directory and Craft Marketplace

Our new Craft Directory (formerly Find Craft) allows us to promote high-quality contemporary craft to a local and international audience. This stunning digital showcase is proving popular with craft consumers, curators, press and publishers. Currently, 76 makers and 23 craft destinations have a paid profile.

Connecting our offline selling exhibitions with our new digital platform, we launched ecommerce functionality in February 2018 by selecting makers from the Directory to sell on the Craft Marketplace. Visitors can now shop beautiful objects from Scotland-based makers' studios straight to their home.

What's On

Our popular What's On section promotes the activities of the thriving Scottish craft sector to consumers. Events, exhibitions and workshops, across Scotland, can be uploaded for free by makers and organisations.

Journal

We raise awareness of the Scottish craft sector and encourage makers to be ambitious through our regular articles and maker interview series.

Social

We regularly share sector news and promote our programme through our social media channels.

Advocacy

Elevating the profile of craft and generating support for the sector is a vital part of Craft Scotland's role. We regularly represent and promote craft to influencers, including; politicians, partners, the media and funders.

Fair pay

We support makers in these challenging economic times by following and encouraging Scottish Artist Union rates of pay and supporting artist exhibiting fees. Championing fair business practices, we are signatories to the Scottish Business Pledge and are a Scottish Living Wage employer.

Developing knowledge

We encourage networks and develop knowledge within the sector, in 2017/18 we ran a series of events, including; facilitating a pilot CPD session for Midlothian teachers and a professional mentoring scheme for emerging-makers to develop their creative and business skills in Aberdeenshire with The Barn.

Curatorial practice

We are a leading member of the Craft Development Network, a group of craft professionals who meet bi-annually to share knowledge. Craft Scotland hosted our first Curatorial Talk in January 2018 with renowned curator Professor Simon Olding. This was held in partnership with Edinburgh College of Art and the RAFT Research Group.

Research

We introduced an annual tracking study to consider the state of the sector through a selected cohort of makers. You can read more about this here: www.craftscotland.org/community/resources

We have also engaged PhD student, Lauren Baker, to examine the long-term impacts of our activities. In partnership with Duncan of Jordanstone College of Art & Design at the University of Dundee, and the University of Edinburgh Business School.

Membership and networks

We are members of a number of organisations, nationally and internationally, to ensure that craft is integrated with the wider cultural sector and that the voice for craft is heard in all important debates. Membership includes: World Craft Council (Europe), Michelangelo Foundation network partner, Culture Republic, Green Arts Initiative and Arts & Business Scotland.

Fiona Logue, our Director, is on the steering committee of Culture Counts, the collective voice of Scotland's cultural sector. She regularly inputs into cultural strategy discussion, is a signatory to cultural open letters and communicates with MSPs.

Digital

We are a signatory to Scotland's Digital Participation Charter and we encourage greater digital literacy for a skilled and empowered sector through our activities. We ran six digital marketing workshops with Scottish Enterprise and Scottish Development International to upskill makers across Scotland on online content creation, SEO and online exporting.

Board and team

Both the Board and team bring a wealth of professional skills, dedication and sector knowledge. The nurturing and training of the team is important to the success of Craft Scotland, and to support the ambitious goals of the sector.

Advisory group

Twice yearly, Craft Scotland meet with our independent advisory group to ensure makers are at the heart of our plans:

Amanda J Simmons (Glass, Castle Douglas)
Andrea Walsh (Glass/Ceramics, Edinburgh)
Angus Ross (Furniture Making, Aberfeldy)
Elke Westen (Glass, Fife)
Frances Priest (Ceramics, Edinburgh)
Geoff Mann (Glass, Edinburgh)
Heather Shields (Textiles, Gourrock)
Jonathan Boyd (Jewellery, Glasgow)
Jonathan Rose (Furniture Making, Hirn)
Karen Westland (Silversmithing & Goldsmithing, Glasgow)
Karen-Ann Dicken (Jewellery, Aberdeen)
Melanie Muir (Jewellery, Auldearn)
Morag Macpherson (Textiles, Kirkcudbright)

Financial highlights

Where did our funds come from in 2017/18?

Public funding is principally Creative Scotland and this year includes support from Scottish Enterprise towards our website development.

How did we spend our money in 2017/18?

Programme includes income from exhibition and outreach partners.

Equalities, diversity and inclusion

Craft Scotland is committed to championing equalities, diversity and inclusion throughout our activities. In 2017, the Board and team undertook in-depth training with Glasgow Women's Library to develop our policies, communications and strategy for the future.

Launched in 2016, our series entitled Make Your Own Story shares interviews with makers from diverse backgrounds and practices. Other activities include providing accessible information about our projects online, provisions for visually impaired exhibition attendees, and developing an accessible website (W3C compliant).

Environment

Operating in an environmentally-friendly way is important to us. Craft Scotland and Creative Carbon Scotland created the Green Crafts Initiative in 2014 (sister project to the Green Arts Initiative) to celebrate and encourage sustainable practices within the craft sector. Currently, there are 50 pledges from makers. Since 2016, we have published online articles entitled Make It Green to share advice and tell inspiring makers' stories – recently featured in The Times.

We have an environmental policy and monitor our carbon footprint. We measure our energy usage and waste, promote greener travel options and source environmentally-friendly supplies.
